

Magenta, would you say this is an aligned interpretation of what the Nine are saying in this transmission?

All incarnating beings, no matter how advanced, run the risk of failing to awaken.

This is correct when incarnating into the 3D Earth universe that you exist within.

Without access to their memories, they may take an action that results in their no longer having the soul memory cohesion to retain individualization after the end of that incarnation.

This is correct. However a soul who has retained a high percentage of memory through multiple incarnations holds a much higher probability of individualising at the end of the ascension cycle than a soul who has retained little memory through many incarnations (but enough to remain on the path of individualisation).

If this choice is not made on a soul level, that being's guidance system would attempt to prevent it, but the risk is always there because of the nature of free will.

This is correct. From the higher perspective ALL souls choose to individualise but those choices will be different depending on the level of memory accumulation through multiple incarnations.

So incarnating on a planet with a high degree of amnesia and hijacking is a fundamentally dangerous endeavor, even for a being that has ascended in previous cycles.

Your statement is correct from your perspective. We would not use the word 'dangerous' to describe this situation however. There is ultimately no danger there from the soul perspective as at the source point level, no soul is ever in danger. However it is a very challenging path for a soul, for indeed they do enter a reality where there are many 'pitfalls' shall we say, regarding memory recall and individualisation.

The being that has ascended in previous cycles will already have individualised. The great majority of these souls do go through soul memory recall and ascend again even when in full service to the beings who have not yet ascended. We say the great majority, for the previous ascension, whilst affording a high probability, is not a guarantee.

I understand that because we are at the end of an ascension cycle, beings are given a way to start over, but that doesn't mean that regeneration and ascension are the only options, is that correct?

That is correct. We have not yet touched upon the 'other options' at this point however due to our mission as a guidance system working with 'information downloads at your own pace' taking into account our conduit's fields and those of the human collective. However, if you are able to ask the question then we can provide the response. So yes, regeneration and ascension are not the only options. However, regeneration and ascension are the most likely options for the great majority.

From previous transmissions, it sounds like some beings may choose to continue their linear experience in a different context.

Some may choose this, yes.

I am wondering why, on a soul level, a large number of beings would choose regeneration when it seems like a large step backwards for their advancement.

It is both backwards and forwards for their advancement, depending on perspective. The reasons they choose regeneration are multiple and varied but all choices are made for the highest good for that soul and for all other souls and indeed the one source soul.

Or is it necessary to reach the cohesion threshold within a single ascension cycle?

Regenesis is not necessary to reach cohesion level. If a soul has not reached cohesion level at the end of one cycle then ultimately 'the only option' afforded that soul is regenesis, despite us saying that there are 'other options.'

The other options involve what we may call 'partial ascension'. This is the 'continuing the linear experience in a different context.' This is neither ascension or regenesis. More explanation on this will be delivered in due course in alignment with our conduit's fields and those of the human collective.
